This email was sent to...

University's charter in 1821. 2021 is officially the 200th anniversary of when the United States Congress established our university.

For those interested in learning about their experiences that emulates and honors grandma's house as central to community life, this community-metropolitan area through the community's personal photographs. Through an immersive gallery virtual setting. Despite the challenges this semester brought, students and teachers remained committed.

This semester was extremely unique, learning to navigate the art making process in a completely different way. Student Assistant, chopsticks, individual aspects, and collaboration in a completely different way. Students and teachers remained engaged. This upcoming June, we celebrate the accomplishments of our students, faculty, and staff. The Nashman Center is also proud to award the Golden Key, an honor society for undergraduate students. The Golden Key is given to students who have made a sustainable and ethical impact in our community. Each hour of service signifies a different issue area where a GW community member has made significant contributions.

2,900 students, faculty, and staff were eligible for the PVSA. The Nashman Center is also proud to award the Gold Key, an honor society for undergraduate students. The Gold Key is given to students who have made a sustainable and ethical impact in our community. Each hour of service signifies a different issue area where a GW community member has made significant contributions.

As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported. As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported. As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported.

During the Zoom-based programs, students participated in Spring 2021 programs and initiatives. In the programs conducted fully via Zoom, students engaged with District Clay Center, and the world of digital illustration and fine arts with local professional artists. In the programs conducted fully via Zoom, students engaged with District Clay Center, and the world of digital illustration and fine arts with local professional artists. In the programs conducted fully via Zoom, students engaged with District Clay Center, and the world of digital illustration and fine arts with local professional artists.

Since we began, we have engaged with our local community and our GW family on a variety of topics. Our programming has continued to grow and evolve, providing opportunities for our community members to learn, engage, and connect with others.

DCCK’s Virtual Learning Series

Friends, we are on the cusp of the 2021 Nashman Center graduating class. We are here to support you, to be here for you. We are here to celebrate the accomplishments that you have made and the positive difference that you have made in the lives of others. Reflect on this time! Remember that part of critical reflection is to notice the good -- not just the bad. Don’t forget to be proud of all that you have accomplished and the difference that you have made in the lives of others.

As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported. As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported. As the academic year comes to a close, we send our deepest appreciation and admiration for the significant work that our community members did this year. Many students, faculty, staff, and community residents with whom we have worked, served and supported.