Black History Month Spotlight: Jacob Lawrence

It's Black History Month and we're highlighting some historical Black figures who have played a significant role in shaping and influencing our country. Jacob Lawrence (1917-2000), a painter, was one of the most recognized Black artists of the 20th century. Lawrence is known for his paintings depicting contemporary Black life in America.

Lawrence's early 1940s series, The Migration of the Negro was highly popular and influential, earning him acclaim throughout the country. Lawrence began professorships at universities across the country in the late 1960s and taught at the University of Washington for 16 years. His work is featured in museums nationwide, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Whitney Museum, and the Art Institute of Chicago.
