Lykos Therapeutics
Chief Commercial Officer

Allison Rosenthal has joined Lykos Therapeutics as the company's first Chief Commercial Officer. Ms. Rosenthal leads Lykos' trailblazing commercial strategy and operations, initially focusing on the potential launch of MDMA-assisted therapy for their lead program to treat those suffering with PTSD. If approved by the FDA, anticipated in Q3 of 2024, this will be the first psychedelic-assisted therapy approved for medical use.

Ms. Rosenthal brings to Lykos more than 25 years of pharmaceutical leadership introducing innovative therapies. Previously, Ms. Rosenthal was Head of U.S. Neuroscience Sales and Marketing for Otsuka where she led, developed, and executed effective commercial strategies for Otsuka's U.S. business with an organization of nearly 1,000 people and revenues approaching $1.5 billion.

"Allison has tremendous commercial leadership experience in psychiatry and mental health, and is the perfect cultural fit for the Lykos team with her warmth and contagious enthusiasm to bring psychedelic-assisted therapy across the finish line to those suffering with PTSD. She is and will continue to be an inspiring champion for all who struggle with mental health issues," said Beth Ehrgott, Managing Director, The Alexander Group.

At Lykos Therapeutics, a public benefit corporation (PBC) founded by MAPS, the mission is to transform mental healthcare. Applying decades of institutional evidence-based research, this pioneering company is relentlessly exploring and developing investigational psychedelics to catalyze novel therapeutic approaches for unmet needs in mental health. Lykos Therapeutics is laser focused on delivering positive impact for all – patients, communities, and society at large – beginning with its lead program for PTSD.
