In This Issue
- What are we learning from the election result?

What are we learning from the election result?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy... Let's reflect on the election results and the path forward.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.

What are we learning from the election results?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.

What are we learning from the election results?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.

What are we learning from the election results?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.

What are we learning from the election results?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.

What are we learning from the election results?
by Dean Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm

We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(1) It is a much closer race than any side expected or wanted. We are a deeply polarized country; some of us have lost faith in our democracy. The election results are a call for us to come together and bridge the divide.

(2) We all are taking a dose of patience and waiting for all votes to be counted. I know this is a lot to ask; but this is what democracy is all about. It is a self-governing system where everyone's voice counts.

(3) The USA is a union of states. Each state has their own rules and they are being followed and respected following the basic premise, "If you voted, your vote should be counted," (regardless of who you voted for). Yet, it is our democracy at work.

(4) Let me say this again: this is a very close race. This means we all have friends, family, neighbors, and colleagues who voted for different candidates. Let's not let this divisiveness divide us. We need to respect each other and come together to build a stronger country.