We will complement this perspective by addressing the role of social justice in the arts. How can artistic expression be a mechanism to generate action? We will explore this question through a series of events, including lectures, discussions, and workshops. For example, we will host a lecture by Ayasha Upchurch and Krystle Brown, who will discuss the ways in which they use their art to address social justice issues. We will also host a panel discussion on the importance of interfaith dialogue, with speakers from a variety of religious traditions.

In addition to these events, we will also host a number of other programs and initiatives. For example, we will host a workshop on interfaith youth leadership, and we will also host a series of discussions on the role of faith in social justice. These events will be open to the public, and we encourage everyone to attend and participate.

We hope that you will join us in our efforts to build a more just and inclusive world. Whether you are a student, a faculty member, or a member of the public, we welcome you to participate in our programs and initiatives.

If you have any questions about our programs, please feel free to contact us. We are always happy to help.

Sincerely,
The Tufts University Chaplaincy
