A Reflection from our Buddhist Chaplain

Dear Tufts Community,

When I was a college student, the first Dharma talk (Buddhist teaching) which really held my mind was a talk by Venerable Maha Ghosananda, the leader of the Khmer Buddhist community, and an occasional visitor to Cambridge Zen Center, where I had begun practicing meditation. The Dharma Room was crowded. He spoke so softly that I could barely hear the words, and yet, at the same time, his presence filled the room. He was speaking about compassion. I could not hear every word he spoke, but I could feel his words. His presence was a lovingkindness that slowly suffused my consciousness as gentle rain. This quality of unconditional love is with me even now, as I rediscover this picture of Maha Ghosananda with Bishop Samuel Ruiz Garcia of Chiapas, Mexico.

Maha Ghosananda taught me to express gratitude to the six directions, thanking all of our relations: parents, siblings, teachers, friends, the government and the Earth. He affirmed, "Especially the Earth, mum," with such humility and sincere love shining forth, that the tenderness, even now, transposes me to another place and time.

When I ask myself what quality we can offer the world to navigate these transformative times, this image comes to mind. A moment in which the mind is brought within the heart, with a quality of love which is so powerful and deep it reaches everywhere-- without attachment, with gratitude and with pure joy.

With best wishes,

Ji Hyang Padma, Ph.D.
Buddhist Chaplain
