August 9, 2021. - August 13, 2021

In trying to understand our deceptive universe, Astrophysicist Hakeem Oluseyi examines spacetime, the illusion of mass, the large-scale structure of the universe, dark matter, and dark energy.

Females of Color and those Underrepresented in STEM (FOCUS) Camp (virtual)

On March 12, 2020, I walked out of my office, a bit early since we were told we were going into lockdown (for three to four weeks max they estimated). I haven't set foot in that office since. Actually, I got a new job here at Mason that started just over a year ago, which I have largely done remotely. What is your new normal?

For most of us, our lives were upended by COVID-19. After the initial shock and concerns regarding health, safety, and daily livelihood were established and better understood, we collectively pivoted to a virtual work environment, finding ways to navigate this uncharted professional landscape. Then some of us ventured back to campus slowly for hybrid learning and working.

With changing CDC guidelines and vaccine availability, our society can start to think more about what a new flexibility (no more commute around here is a big deal and saves tons of time). Yet, after a while, many of us found ways to leverage this new freedom (no more commute around here is a big deal and saves tons of time). Yet, after a while, many of us found ways to leverage this new flexibility.

Let's face it, the initial disruption was not easy. Yet, after a while, many of us found ways to leverage this new freedom. With changing CDC guidelines and vaccine availability, our society can start to think more about what a new flexibility (no more commute around here is a big deal and saves tons of time). Yet, after a while, many of us found ways to leverage this new freedom.

For most of us, our lives were upended by COVID-19. After the initial shock and concerns regarding health, safety, and daily livelihood were established and better understood, we collectively pivoted to a virtual work environment, finding ways to navigate this uncharted professional landscape. Then some of us ventured back to campus slowly for hybrid learning and working.