Nominations are now open December 6, 2021 | 2 to 3:30 p.m.
Biology, Director, MicroBiome Analysis Center.
Join us for a lecture on "The Selfish Microbiome and Human Cognition" from November 18, 2021 | 6:30 p.m.
Galileo's Science Cafe
Join us for a Smithsonian Associates Lecture with Sara Seager, a professor of physics and planetary science at Finding Earth 2.0: The Search for Habitable Worlds with George Mason University Observatory
Unique and memorable, the Hunger Banquet helps raise awareness, as organizers and participants alike
Mason students, faculty, staff, and alumni are invited for powerful well-being conversations on racial
November 17, 2021 | 9 a.m. to noon
Racial Healing Circles
by Elizabeth Grisham
Wednesday, November 10, 2021
Find out more about their study: "Manufacturing and Characterization of Potent mRNA Lipid Nanoparticle Vaccines at Multiple Scales."
Professor,
Analysis Center
Bioengineering;
Michael Buschmann, Department Chair and Professor, research
by Fernando Miralles-Wilhelm
Taking our collective scientific success from Good to Great
In this Issue
IN THE NEWS
Happening at Mason
About the 2021 Commonwealth Conference on Food and Agriculture Faculty Affairs and Research Development Interactive Workshop Series designed to address key issues central to faculty development and success. Faculty from across the state ready to train and support entrepreneurs who seek to turn their innovative ideas into businesses. The Mason community is invited to the

In preparation for a report on the U.N. summit, Mason climate expert shares warming potential from current climate models
Dr. Washington outlined his Access to Excellence vision including the Mason Virginia Promise: a pathway toward the bachelor's degree or one's own business for every Virginian who wants it—touting
Dr. Washington referred to faculty development and research as disease modeling, COVID-19 genome data, and human #MasonScience students conducting research in areas such as disease modeling, COVID-19 genome data, and human...