Down Syndrome - Proven Cure for Impaired Vision!

By Jared Hawkins

It was 2:30 a.m. I woke with a start in the hospital room. The day before had been a long day. My wife had gone into labor early that morning, 5 weeks early. We raced to the hospital.

A Note from Parent to Parent

Another month has quickly passed by. I love the changing of colors and the crisp mornings. This time of year has also been stressful with distance learning, elections and dealing with an uptick in Covid cases in our valley. Take a deep breath, you will get through this.

I wanted to share some information with you about the new Educational Ombudsman, Carrie Basas. She is available to help answer questions and work with you on any school issues you may be experiencing with your child. They are a wealth of knowledge about what the schools should be doing for your child even if the child is getting 2.5 hours a day in person learning or distance learning. She said that the home is the classroom and that teachers need to be treating it as such and that the IEP goals should be followed. To reach Carrie or the staff at OEO:

New Addition to our Website!

We have added a list of children's books (divided by reading level from easy reader to young adult) that feature characters with disabilities. This new section can be found under the Resources Tab, in the Education Section. It is by no means an exhaustive list, just a starting point to begin exploring.
