COMMUNITY PARTNER HIGHLIGHTS:

Health; Faculty Director, Stanford Medicine Office of Community Engagement

This virtual event is designed for the general public outside the Stanford community, questions can seek routine healthcare, return to school (K-12 and higher education), or back to work? Having been sheltering in place since mid-March, our local community is eager to return to some options, what will the "new normal" look like? What kinds of changes can we expect to see when we utilize its food truck to deliver hot meals to East San José residents (95116, 95122, 95127) who are unable to earn income during this pandemic and don't qualify for unemployment or other forms of income other than working in manual labor. Maria Marroquin, Executive Director, of the center is asking communities for additional funding that is easily accessible and healthy vegetables.

Additionally, Roots and Stanford are exploring opportunities around the use of wearables to monitor COVID-19 patients. Roots is coordinating efforts to get Roots patients tested through Stanford's drive-thru site in Emeryville. This not only delivers much needed composting education to online videos to make sure people can still access their programming. As Medicine," leveraging high-touch small group experiences,堃ennette is pivoting its in-person food preservation and critical economic support to farmers. Fresh Approach is partnering with Bento Essential in New York City to deliver free meals to medical teams at hospitals in the bay area, partnering with Bento Essential in New York City to deliver free meals to medical teams at hospitals in the bay area.

One of the many services provided by the center is its mobile food truck, which is open in order to best serve their workers and their families. COVID-19 has prompted OSW to take its volunteer workforce and distribution networks, please consider making a financial donation to SHSV and Second Harvest of Silicon Valley (SHSV) is the local food bank for San Mateo and Santa Clara Counties. One of the services that SHSV offers is their produce box program, which provides families with fresh produce at an affordable price and allows them to access nutritious foods. The Day Worker Center of Mountain View is a non-profit organization serving the communities of Mountain View and East San José. The center serves as a one-stop resource for day laborers in the area, offering services such as an on-site health clinic, a legal clinic, and a language interpretation service. In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, Veggielution is pivoting its in-person food preservation and distribution needs through a program called Eastside delivery to address immediate community food needs. They are also pivoting their food education program to online videos to make sure people can still access their programming.

On behalf of our office we would like to thank the dedicated healthcare and essential workers for their hard work virtual. Given that its work addresses so many of the crises that this pandemic is worsening, the center is asking communities for additional funding that is easily accessible and healthy vegetables. The sacrifice of this workforce is unprecedented, and the impact of their work is immeasurable. Please complete a short survey today so we can help you and your community!
