Virtual Graduation Celebration

No matter where you are, graduating from LSU is a reason to celebrate.

Visit lsu.edu/celebration to explore various ways to prepare for the big day, then join our graduation watch party on the LSU Facebook page on May 15 at 10 a.m. to wish our newest class of proud Tiger alumni congratulations and appreciation for their hard work and continued determination through trying times.

LSU Class of 2020: Then & Now Photos

To commemorate all the hard work our students have done since first starting their education, we are making a personalized "Then and Now" photo album of our graduating LSU Tigers to feature on the LSU Parent & Family Programs Facebook page. This appreciation post will be composed of two photos, one from childhood/any K-12 graduating ceremony and the other of any LSU senior pictures. Submit your pictures here. The deadline for submissions is this Friday, May 8.

Survey and Resources for Graduating Students

A NOTE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear LSU
Families,

I'm extremely impressed and immensely proud of the entire LSU community for the way it has responded to the COVID-19 pandemic, from the speed and adeptness with which our students and faculty transitioned to online classes, to our researchers and medical professionals who have been fighting on the front lines to save lives. It has been nothing short of a Herculean effort, set against the backdrop of unprecedented circumstances, and I am constantly inspired by the way everyone is pulling together to keep LSU moving forward.

But like our students, faculty and staff, I'm ready to get back to campus. While we are conducting our summer courses remotely, let me assure you it is our intention to have campus open and return to in-person, traditional classes this fall. Of course, it's likely that things may look a little different when we do.

Smaller classes may meet in larger classrooms, for instance, to promote physical distancing. Larger classes may meet in even more spacious facilities, or, in certain cases, meet online. Common spaces such as the Student Union, library and dining halls may have capacity restrictions or otherwise operate differently. Student organizations may have to alter any large events they host to promote safety. And faculty and staff who can effectively do so may be asked to stagger their days in the office or work remotely on some days.

As we continue to plan for a wide variety of options and monitor this ever-evolving situation, our guidepost will always be the safety and well-being of our students, faculty and staff. We will devise creative and innovative ways to bring people together socially while still remaining physically distant, for as long as necessary, and we will continue to follow federal and state guidelines.

Regardless of what this “new normal” looks like, I’m confident we’ll thrive as one LSU community. At LSU, what makes us successful is that we come from all walks of life, but we live and learn together as a community. We are a city within a city, and our population hails from all 64 Louisiana parishes, all 50 states, and more than 100 countries. This diversity and sense of community contributes to a better college experience and, most importantly, student success.

Sincerely,
Thomas C. Galligan, Jr.
LSU Interim President and Professor of Law
