In this issue:

- A message from the Dean
- Expert opinion on current environmental science job market trends
- Research & Discovery
- Mason Science Community
- In the News
- Events

Message from the Dean

February 17, 2021

Dear Mason Community,

We are excited to announce our participation in the newly created Global Sustainability Scholars (GSS) Fellows program. This program offers graduate students in the Department of Environmental Science and Policy 10-week paid summer fellowships in global sustainability organizations. Applicants must be Mason students with a passion for sustainability and a commitment to making a positive impact on the world.

Applications are due February 26, 2021.

Dr. Fernando R. Miralles-Wilhelm
Dean, College of Science

In the News

- Science experts from Mason, NIST, ANL, and ORNL to discover a quantum phenomenon
- National Center for Biodefense and Infectious Diseases (NCBID) partners with Noble Life Sciences to develop novel therapeutics and diagnostics
- University researchers opportunities to collaborate
- Research and Scholarship at Mason Orientation
- Mason students for new Global Sustainability Scholars (GSS) Fellows program
- New initiative to address the widest range of needs related to public health
- Life Sciences Department of Environmental Science and Policy
- College of Science

Events

- Research & Discovery
- Mason Science Community
- In the News
- Happening at Mason
- Events

Stay Connected

© 2020 George Mason University