We need climate action and an open dialogue. We need you and everyone to join in.

This second virtual conference will examine the implications of COVID-19 for public health and the environment in the context of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The event will be organized by the University of Basel, the University of Geneva and the UN Sustainable Development Solutions Network (UN SDSN). The event will be coordinated by MDPI under the patronage of the University of Basel, the University of Geneva and the UN SDSN. The event will be broadcast from Washington DC, Stockholm and with speakers, thinkers and doers from all over the world.

This webinar will provide you with an opportunity to learn more about FACS’ research and the kind of work that we are doing to help address global challenges. We will share our latest findings on sustainability, health, and wellbeing, and discuss how our research can help inform policy decisions.

We hope you can join us for this important webinar and that you will find our insights useful for your work.

We are also excited to announce that we will be launching a new online platform called EARTHRISE, which will bring together experts from around the world to discuss the latest research on sustainability and wellbeing.

This platform will provide a space for open dialogue and collaboration, and we encourage you to join us and contribute your own ideas.

We look forward to hearing from you and hope that you will consider joining us for this important webinar.

Best regards,
