A Note from Parent to Parent

Hi all,

We face many trials and triumphs on this journey raising children with disabilities and can often feel overwhelmed and alone, left out or always trying to explain our child's behaviors, diagnosis etc. I was thinking about a young lady that I see weekly who is in a wheelchair with little movement, cannot speak and is fed through a g-tube. Some may look at this young lady and feel pity or sadness for all she cannot do, but every single time I see her, she has the biggest smile on her face and is so happy. It doesn't matter what kind of day she is having or what is going on around her, she is happy. I often ask myself, who should have pity and sadness? This young lady who is happy to see others, she does not care what we look like, what we wear, where we live, etc. She sees you and that makes her happy. I ask myself, who really are the disabled of the world? Most of the time, our children are accepting of others no matter their socio-economic background, race, color of their skin, sexual orientation etc. We as human beings can learn so much from the children we raise, teach, or come in contact with who have a disability. They are so valuable and we have so much to learn from those who are viewed as disabled.
