Expanding Business Opportunities for Newcomers and Longtime Attendees of NGLCC's Interantional Business & Leadership Conference

NGLCC's biggest event of the year is this week and two business owners are approachng it with excitement and varying perspectives.

David Ladgraf, Founder and CEO of Make It Happen Management, is attending conference for the first time this year. He is hoping to expand brand recognition and build international and national relationships for his company. He is looking forward to one-to-one matchmaking, networking and opportunities to give his testimonial.

Joanne Balady, Founder of Balady Promotions, is attending conference for the sixth year. She is looking forward to spending a great deal of time in the Expo Hall visiting with Corporate Partners and Sponsors. "I could spend hours in there meeting professionals," says Balady, who targets five companies each year. "I think meeting them year after year has really helped my business to build visibility and credibility and now I believe we are reaping the benefits from our investment.

Insights on NGLCC's International Conference from Last Year's Biz Pitch Winner

Since winning the national competition last year, eParel has seen exponentially positive results.

Invented at Columbia University, eParel administers a web-first SaaS platform where service businesses outfit their staff. "As a gay man, the eParel model cuts to the core of who I am. It's about identity, creativity, and self-expression."

The scalability of eParel's business model eventually led them to participate in business pitching competitions through NGLCC. For those that are planning to attend this year's NGLCC International Conference, they suggest a plan. "Be strategic, but also try to relax and enjoy it. With an extensive list of programs, conference can be a boundless source of personal and professional growth."
