Dear [Name],

Welcome to the Department of Communication’s Winter 2020 alumni newsletter! Each semester, we have a unique opportunity to reflect on the past year: the good, the bad, and the really bad. What a year it has been. We hope that you, like us, are grateful for the resiliency of our families, friends, and colleagues. It is heartening to reflect on some of our accomplishments, particularly the sacrifices we all made, and to see the outpouring of support from our alumni, friends, and the wider community.

We also want to keep you updated on the department’s activities and developments: we received national recognition and Greg Cranmer’s book, “Sports Communication: A Strategic Approach,” was recently published by Peter Lang. Our faculty are achieving national success in their research and teaching, and they are clearly top emerging leaders in the field. We are thrilled about what the future holds for our newest graduates; they completed their Clemson journeys in the face of challenges and COVID-19.

For many of us, the fall semester was one in which we encountered a real world tsunami before classes resumed in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter, we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.

In many ways, the experiences during this crisis have enlightened so many of us in the department and at Clemson to not only how strong we really are, but also how much stronger we truly can be by applying the lessons learned, and the thinking about the future for teaching and research.

In many ways, the experiences had and the thinking about the future for teaching and research have been influenced by the global pandemic.

We hope you enjoy the Winter 2020 issue of our alumni newsletter. If you have questions, concerns, suggestions, or if you just want to chat, please don’t hesitate to contact us. We are thrilled about what the future holds for our newest graduates; they completed their Clemson journeys in the face of challenges and COVID-19.

Everyone in the Department has been working on ways to maximize our ability to educate our students, generate high quality, impactful research and serve the University—in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Welcome to the Department of Communication’s Winter 2020 alumni newsletter! Each semester, we have a unique opportunity to reflect on the past year: the good, the bad, and the really bad. What a year it has been. We hope that you, like us, are grateful for the resiliency of our families, friends, and colleagues. It is heartening to reflect on some of our accomplishments, particularly the sacrifices we all made, and to see the outpouring of support from our alumni, friends, and the wider community.

We also want to keep you updated on the department’s activities and developments: we received national recognition and Greg Cranmer’s book, “Sports Communication: A Strategic Approach,” was recently published by Peter Lang. Our faculty are achieving national success in their research and teaching, and they are clearly top emerging leaders in the field. We are thrilled about what the future holds for our newest graduates; they completed their Clemson journeys in the face of challenges and COVID-19.

For many of us, the fall semester was one in which we encountered a real world tsunami before classes resumed in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter, we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.

In many ways, the experiences during this crisis have enlightened so many of us in the department and at Clemson to not only how strong we really are, but also how much stronger we truly can be by applying the lessons learned, and the thinking about the future for teaching and research.

In many ways, the experiences had and the thinking about the future for teaching and research have been influenced by the global pandemic.

We hope you enjoy the Winter 2020 issue of our alumni newsletter. If you have questions, concerns, suggestions, or if you just want to chat, please don’t hesitate to contact us. We are thrilled about what the future holds for our newest graduates; they completed their Clemson journeys in the face of challenges and COVID-19.