With the Fall 2020 semester in the rearview mirror, we are anticipating a restful holiday season before classes resume in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.

Four new tenure-line faculty joined our department in August 2020 and they have hit the ground running. They teach and research in the areas of strategic communication, sports communication, and social media and will conduct research in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication. Brandon Boatwright joins us from the University of Tennessee, where he recently completed his Ph.D. Brandon teaches and researches in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication and will be an asset to our director of the Social Media Communication Research Laboratory.

We also welcomed Jordan Elling to the Department of Communication as academic advisor for our undergraduate programs. Jordan recently joined us on campus, and she already is making a difference in helping our students on campus and is making sure our students are doing well during the COVID-19 global pandemic.

We also welcomed Joseph Mazer to the Department of Communication as academic advisor for our undergraduate programs. Joseph recently joined us on campus, and he already is making a difference in helping our students on campus and is making sure our students are doing well during the COVID-19 global pandemic.

Everyone in the Department has been working on ways to maximize our ability to educate our students, generate high quality, nationally recognized research, and shape our students for emerging leaders in the field.

Also recently completed他的 Ph.D. Brandon teaches and researches in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication and will be an asset to our director of the Social Media Communication Research Laboratory.

President Clements to serve on the Institute’s Leadership Institute last year, Joe was asked by Brandon teaches and researches in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication and will be an asset to our director of the Social Media Communication Research Laboratory.

We also welcomed Jordan Elling to the Department of Communication as academic advisor for our undergraduate programs. Jordan recently joined us on campus, and she already is making a difference in helping our students on campus and is making sure our students are doing well during the COVID-19 global pandemic.

Everyone in the Department has been working on ways to maximize our ability to educate our students, generate high quality, nationally recognized research, and shape our students for emerging leaders in the field.

With the Fall 2020 semester in the rearview mirror, we are anticipating a restful holiday season before classes resume in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.

Four new tenure-line faculty joined our department in August 2020 and they have hit the ground running. They teach and research in the areas of strategic communication, sports communication, and social media and will conduct research in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication. Brandon Boatwright joins us from the University of Tennessee, where he recently completed his Ph.D. Brandon teaches and researches in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication and will be an asset to our director of the Social Media Communication Research Laboratory.

We also welcomed Jordan Elling to the Department of Communication as academic advisor for our undergraduate programs. Jordan recently joined us on campus, and she already is making a difference in helping our students on campus and is making sure our students are doing well during the COVID-19 global pandemic.

Everyone in the Department has been working on ways to maximize our ability to educate our students, generate high quality, nationally recognized research, and shape our students for emerging leaders in the field.

With the Fall 2020 semester in the rearview mirror, we are anticipating a restful holiday season before classes resume in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.

Four new tenure-line faculty joined our department in August 2020 and they have hit the ground running. They teach and research in the areas of strategic communication, sports communication, and social media and will conduct research in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication. Brandon Boatwright joins us from the University of Tennessee, where he recently completed his Ph.D. Brandon teaches and researches in sports communication, strategic communication and health communication and will be an asset to our director of the Social Media Communication Research Laboratory.

We also welcomed Jordan Elling to the Department of Communication as academic advisor for our undergraduate programs. Jordan recently joined us on campus, and she already is making a difference in helping our students on campus and is making sure our students are doing well during the COVID-19 global pandemic.

Everyone in the Department has been working on ways to maximize our ability to educate our students, generate high quality, nationally recognized research, and shape our students for emerging leaders in the field.

With the Fall 2020 semester in the rearview mirror, we are anticipating a restful holiday season before classes resume in the new year. It seems like lately there is never a dull moment, so with this newsletter we try to convey just a snapshot of the department’s recent accomplishments.