Call for Applications: Building Capacity for Small Organizations to Engage in PCOR/CER

Abstracts are due Monday, March 13, 2023.

The Call for Applications: Building Capacity for Small Organizations to Engage in PCOR/CER is now open.

Background

The Office of Community Engagement (OCE) at Stanford University is committed to advancing community-engaged research and practice. To support this mission, the OCE has established a series of capacity-building projects aimed at encouraging meaningful stakeholder involvement, dissemination of PCORI-Engagement Award: Building Capacity for Small Organizations to Engage in PCOR/CER findings, and community capacity building. These projects are designed to provide small organizations with the knowledge, resources, and support they need to conduct community-engaged research that is meaningful, impactful, and sustainable.

Purpose

The purpose of the Call for Applications: Building Capacity for Small Organizations to Engage in PCOR/CER is to identify proposals that align with the OCE’s mission to support community-engaged research and practice.

Eligibility

Eligible applicants include small organizations that are engaged in community-engaged research, community-based organizations, and non-profit organizations. Applicants must be based in the United States and have a demonstrated commitment to community engagement.

Selection Criteria

Selection criteria for the Call for Applications: Building Capacity for Small Organizations to Engage in PCOR/CER will be based on the following:

1. A clear and compelling proposal that outlines the organization’s capacity-building project.
2. A demonstration of the organization’s commitment to community engagement.
3. The organization’s ability to implement and sustain the capacity-building project.
4. The organization’s ability to disseminate the project’s findings.
5. The organization’s ability to engage in meaningful research.

Application Process

Applicants must submit a completed application by March 13, 2023. The application process will include a written proposal, a budget, and a letter of support from a community partner.
