A Reflection from your Buddhist Chaplain

Love and death are the great gifts that are passed on to us that most of us leave unopened. --Rainer Maria Rilke

This week, our Buddhist sangha welcomes Lama Tsering Ngodup Yodsampa, to speak on death and the afterlife. We are also, together with the Humanist Community at Tufts (HCAT), hosting a Death Café. While these may sound like somber occasions, there is immense creative potential that opens up when we turn towards the truth of mortality and grief, however we can.

Great poets and artists, such as Rainer Maria Rilke, have made that choice, taken that journey-- have chosen light, by really looking at grief rather than staying in the dark of denial. Rilke willingly entered into that transformation, and it was creatively advantageous. Rilke experienced a breakthrough when writing Requiem for a Friend to process the death of his good friend Paula Becker, which propelled him to write the Duino Elegies and other masterpieces. This existential encounter served to facilitate his own artistic process, so that he was able to hold a mirror up to the mysteries of love and transformation which are uncovered through the human journey.

The programs that Tufts' Sangha offers this week present opportunities for small group discussion about the issues and questions surrounding the greatest journey. When we enter the conversation about death, we meet it as an ally, and learn how to live and love fearlessly in the here-and-now.

We hope you can join us Wednesday 7:00 p.m.- 8:30 pm in Goddard Chapel for the talk on Death and the Afterlife, or Friday 5:30 p.m. - 7:30 p.m. for the Death Café. All Tufts community members are welcome. If you're unable to attend, I invite you to savor a breath, a color, an exchange – anything – about being here, just as you are, right now.

Death Cafe

Friday, December 1, 5:30 p.m., Interfaith Center

What do you believe happens after death? Does it matter? Would you want to know how/when you're going to die? What does it mean to you to leave a legacy? The Tufts Humanist Community and the Tufts Buddhist Mindfulness Sangha will be hosting the Death Cafe for members of the broader Tufts community to talk openly with one another about death and dying. At a Death Cafe, people, often strangers, gather to share a meal, eat cake, and discuss our different ideas surrounding death. The goal is to provide a space for conversations about death to help people make the most of their (finite) lives. Rather than a grief support or counseling session, these directed discussions of death have no agenda or objectives, and only hope to explore our thoughts and ideas about death and dying. All are welcome and invited!

Sign up for the Winter Carillon Concert

Sign up by Tuesday, December 5

Do you know how to play piano? Have you ever wanted to play the Goddard Chapel bells? The Goddard Chapel carillon is a series of bells in the chapel tower, which are controlled by a set of piano keys within the building. Tufts owns a collection of 25 bells, which means that only part of the keyboard corresponds to a bell. We are inviting students to play a song of their choosing, whether it is a more traditional holiday song, a modern day pop song, or anything in-between. Interested students can fill out the form below to participate in our first ever Winter Carillon concert next week. You can contact Suzanne Cartreine or Emma Browning, A25, for more information. Those who cannot play are welcome to join us in Goddard for hot drinks or to listen.
