Bringing the Peabody to Andover Summer Session

The Peabody visits Ella Houlihan's Intro to Bio summer session class. The students learned about human evolution and analyzed the Peabody's skull cast collection in a class activity. Explore more about Andover Summer Session here.

Things are a little quieter here at the Peabody during the summer, but despite that we have lots to share. Check out this month's newsletter for updates on our renovation, summer session classes, and a fabulous new acquisition from the Toya Family of Jemez Pueblo.

Building Progress Report

Contributed by Marla Taylor

Things are looking a little different inside the Peabody these days! The Peabody building project has been active for over two months now and it is time for a brief progress report. Read on for more about the current work being done inside the Peabody... YES, there's photos!

New Acquisition: Three Generations

Contributed by Ryan Wheeler

The Peabody has several amazing pieces of pottery made by members of the Toya Family of Jemez Pueblo. Since 2013, the Toyas have visited Phillips Academy Andover for week-long, student workshops on traditional Pueblo pottery. Recently, the Peabody accepted a new acquisition by three generations of Toya Family artists.

Summer Session Selections

Contributed by Nick Andrusin

Despite being out of the building for the last several months (and for several months to follow) the Peabody is still part of teaching and learning at Phillips Academy, albeit in a more restricted fashion. Most recently, the Peabody visted some Summer Session classes. Read below!
