Making Moves Towards Renovation Work

The Peabody is making moves to prepare its building for renovation work beginning in Spring 2023. This month the Peabody staff packed up and organized the building, preparing furniture and some supplies to be moved to an off-site storage location during the Peabody's renovations. The Peabody cannot thank our PA and Off-Campus movers enough for their hard work these past several weeks! Stay tuned for more updates on our preparations for renovation work.

Join us for this month's newsletter featuring Adam Way's final blog on The Phillipian's coverage of the Peabody, student volunteer perspectives, and ProPublica's reporting on NAGPRA. Look for more next month!

The Repatriation Project by ProPublica

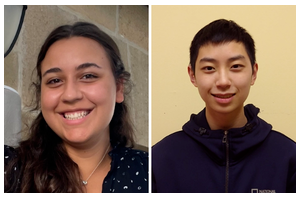

Contributed by Marla Taylor

For more than a year, a dedicated reporting team at ProPublica has been exploring NAGPRA and repatriation. They have been investigating what is behind the overall slow return of ancestral remains back to descendant communities. Their work has culminated in The Repatriation Project. Read on to learn more!

Student Volunteer Voices

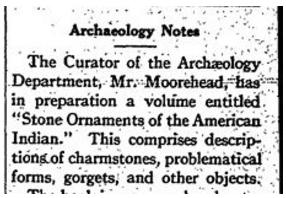

Contributed by Elizabeth Reppas, Anthony Chung Yin Woo, and John Bergman-McCool

Here at the Peabody, we are fortunate to have students assist us with collections-related projects. Work duty is the primary avenue for students to help our small staff, but we also rely on non-work duty students who volunteer in various ways during their free time. Read on to hear from two of our student volunteers!

Archæology Notes

The Curator of the Archæology Department, Mr. Moorehead, has in preparation a volume entitled "Stone Ornaments of the American Indian." This comprises descriptions of charmstones, problematical forms, gorgets, and other objects.

Contributed by Adam Way

This blog is the culmination of work done by Independent Researcher/Volunteer Adam Way to explore how the Peabody Institute has been portrayed by Phillips Academy students in The Phillipian over the years. His final blog is a summary of what he learned.
