October 2024

Dear Colleague,

Happy Halloween! We hope you're enjoying the spooky season.

I know it's not Africa related, but I'm so excited to tell you that I just got home from a three-week trip to Panama for ATWS before spending 10 days in Guyana on a fishing expedition. It was out of this world.

As for Africa, Emerging Destinations just announced another exciting addition to our portfolio — Karibu Camps & Lodges in Tanzania. The Karibu collection includes five upscale camps spread across the safari trail of northern Tanzania in epic locations like the Serengeti, Ngorongoro Crater and Tarangire National Park.

Jane is currently in Tanzania checking them out and I'll be heading there next month. If you have any questions or want to learn more, feel free to send me an email.

Those of you who want to meet with members of the Emerging Destinations team should check out our travel schedules below. And don't forget to peek at the exciting offers from some of our Africa clients in the NAAG section.

Happy November!

Jenna, Jane, Ana & Paula

Uganda Cycling Safaris

Adventure Consults realizes that most (if not all) travelers don't enjoy spending lots of time in motor vehicles or motorized boats. As a result, they've decided to introduce cycling safaris to complement the experience for those visiting Uganda.

Bike safaris are certainly nothing new. It's pedaling through the African bush that makes this adventure unique.

Why Do They Call It Elephant Bedroom Camp?

Pachyderms don't actually sleep at this luxury tented camp in the wildlife-rich Samburu National Reserve of northern Kenya. But they seem to make a habit of casually wandering through the middle of camp at their whim and fancy.

Don't be surprised to find an elephant casually wandering past your upscale safari tent, meandering along the nearby bank of the Ewaso Ngiro River, or even sauntering between tables in the camp's outdoor dining area.
