

Greetings from the Mothership!

Hello everybody!

Today finds us navigating the meteorological transitional space between June and early July gloom.

It sounds like a bummer, but it isn't.

A quick synopsis for those not familiar with Central California weather patterns...

"June Gloom" is precisely that—the month is wet, gray, and far from the sun-soaked beachy wonderland described in countless Fantastic Baggys and Ventures songs.

Early July resembles June in this regard thus far, and that happens to be an extremely fortuitous thing.

As you may have heard, The Willow Fire, began in the Los Padres National Forest in Monterey County on June 17 and went on to burn 2,877 acres of remote wilderness in the Big Sur back country.

Thanks to cooperative weather conditions and the miraculous and heroic work of firefighters (1), the fire was 87% contained as of June 28th. (2)

So....we're breathing a sigh of relief out here as things continue to return to normal!

Speaking of which, here's your digest!

The monks were ready!

The Monterey County Sheriff's Office lifted all evacuation warnings and orders for the Willow Fire, which is wonderful news.

But before the order was lifted, the Tassajara Fire Crew of zen monks were prepared to defend the monastery from the fire.

"I'd been mentally preparing for it for a while, and it was kind of like, 'Oh, this is it,'"

Tassajara Fire Crew.

“It was sooner than we all expected. I figured I’d at least have another few weeks.”

"The Fall of America: A

Fiftieth Anniversary Tribute"

Did we narrowly escape the fall of America in January or is it lurking just around the corner?

Allen Ginsberg foretold this question 50 years ago in his book "The Fall of America," and his apocalyptic premonitions, sadly, are still relevant.

To commemorate the publication of this work, "The Fall of America: A Fiftieth Anniversary Tribute," available as an LP or a longer CD via Bandcamp, finds Devendra Banhart, Andrew Bird, Bill Frisell, Yo La Tengo (6), and others interpreting and reimagining Ginsberg's personal and political visions.

Our friends Peter Hale and Jesse Goodman of the Allen Ginsberg Project, the online manifestation of the Allen Ginsberg Estate, produced it!

Click here for an interview with Peter and Jesse in Relix magazine as he talks about how the project came together!

And that should do it!!

Thanks for reading. We'll see you down the coast and next month—if not sooner!

Until then, we'll let the Ventures guide us into the cosmic sunset...
