TOWN GUIDES

A couple of weeks ago, when we planned this newsletter, we weren't yet overly concerned about coronavirus in the U.S., "community spread," and runs on hand sanitizer. I'm nothing if not prepared, so I filled the larder this weekend and spent more at the grocery store than I have since Hurricane Sandy. A handful of shoppers and I picked over a basket of travel-sized Purell, all that remained in the store (and apparently in town, as one woman had already scoped out Stop & Shop and Walmart). So it seems a bit of a disconnect to be sharing our annual round-up of swimwear and sandals. But we must go about our business, and this happens to be ours. We are planning a vacation in April but waiting it out for the moment, but that copper number below has my name on it. I'll be all set for summer, and hopefully, by that time, this nightmare will be over.

Love, Erica

I pulled a sly trick on my husband last week. He's not a fan of brunch, but I am, so I made a reservation at Tavern on State in New Haven for 2pm. I figured I could almost pass it off as dinner. And guess what? It worked...

The Best One-Piece Swimsuits

This year's subtle deep colors (which look lovely without a tan), plus ever-popular snakeskin and animal prints might get me out of my basic black bathing suit bubble.

Happy Birthday, Beethoven!

Put on your party hats! This year marks the 250th anniversary of the birth of Ludwig van Beethoven. To celebrate this important milestone, Musical Masterworks is presenting the complete cycle of Beethoven's String Quartets over two extended weekends in March and May, performed by the amazing Ehnes Quartet.

Encompassing a total of 18 different pieces, this body of work is considered to be one of the most pivotal and profound artistic achievements in the history of mankind. Beethoven's String Quartets represent the arc of an extraordinary life and of a groundbreaking compositional career.

The cycle, performed in six concerts, will be a powerful and monumental journey for audience members and performers alike, as Beethoven's masterpieces spring vividly to life in the intimate and acoustically exquisite First Congregational Church of Old Lyme.

General Concert Admission: $40 | Student: $5 | Beethoven Subscriptions available.

March 13, 14 & 15 | May 1, 2 & 3
