Black History Month Spotlight: Huey P. Newton

This Black History Month, we'll be highlighting some historical Black figures who have played a significant role in shaping and influencing our country. Huey P. Newton (1942-1989) was an activist and co-founder of the Black Panther Party, a civil rights organization aimed at promoting Black Power and increasing equal treatment for Black Americans in the late 1960s to early 1970s. Newton and the Black Panthers advocated for increased community involvement, a decrease in police brutality and mistreatment by public officials, and investment in Black communities. The Black Panther Party was heavily influenced by Malcolm X and his philosophy of “by any means necessary” as a way to achieve equality. Although controversial, Newton proved that no measures are too drastic when advocating for equal rights.
