Special Olympics Texas "Healthy Athletes" Program

Compared to the public, people with intellectual disabilities often experience increased health disparities, such as substandard health care and poorer health outcomes. For example, adults with intellectual disabilities are five times more likely to have diabetes, three times more likely to have arthritis, and two times more likely to have heart disease and obesity. Furthermore, the life expectancy for people with intellectual disabilities is about sixteen years shorter than the general population.

To address these health disparities, Special Olympics Texas offers Healthy Athletes, a program that provides free health screenings in a fun, welcoming environment. We offer screenings in the following areas: physical exam, podiatry, vision/eye health, audiology, dentistry, health promotion, mental health, and physical therapy.

We need physicians (and other medical professionals) to host these screenings for our population. If this is something you, or someone you know, may be interested in, please contact Amber Crady at acrady@sotx.org for more information.
