Dear Colleague,

We hope that you and your loved ones are safe and healthy!

Summer season is drawing near with the hope that our world starts returning to normalcy.

Iceland, Ireland and Aruba, among others, are reopening their borders in middle June and allowing tourist arrivals. Peru is planning to do the same in July, and most likely other countries will take similar measures.

During these almost 10 weeks of quarantine, I have had plenty of time to watch documentaries, read travel magazines and dive into social media. Along the way I discovered many amazing new places in this wonderful world I want to see. Suddenly my bucket list has grown and I think I'll need a sabbatical year to do so!

I recommend you take this down time to work on your clients' or your own bucket list. After so many weeks at home, I'm sure everybody wants to travel again and explore new destinations as soon as it's allowed. To inspire you, we've compiled in this monthly newsletter some of the most beautiful places in the Americas. Hope you enjoy it!

Stay safe,

Ana

3 Reasons to Cross the Andes by Bike with Cruce Andino

For anyone who loves cycling, crossing Andes by bike is a classic adventure. Do you know how many places you can cycle through the Andes between Chile and Argentina? Forty-three! That's a huge number!

But there's only one crossing that offers the experience of navigating across the Andes via three lakes — connected by four land legs that you traverse on your bike. That's the Cruce Andino Bike and Boat service that departs from Puerto Varas in Chile or Bariloche in Argentina.

How Tourism Created Guyana's First Female Pilots

1977 was a big year for the Guyana Defense Force. It was in that year that the force hired its first female pilots: Cheryl Pickering-Moore and Beverley Drake.

"It was an exciting time in my life", says Drake, "as my dad always wanted to be a pilot". However, "as a black and under the colonial system, he never got an opportunity; I lived his dream and made my mother proud."

Touring Argentina and Uruguay in High Style

With upscale properties in three of South America's most exciting destinations — Buenos Aires, Punta del Este and Iguazú Falls — Grand Hotels Lux offers discerning business and leisure travelers a stylish choice in accommodation, cuisine and leisure activities.

Cruising Solo doesn't mean you have to Explore Alone

Thinking about cruising in the Amazon but don't know who to take along?
