From My Perspective....

Many students rely on student loans to assist with the funding of their education. It is important to be aware of the different types of loans available and to limit what you borrow. There are two main types of student loans: Subsidized and Unsubsidized.

Subsidized loans are subsidized by the federal government. They are available to students who demonstrate financial need. The federal government pays the interest on the loan while the student is in school, and the student does not have to repay the interest until after graduation.

Unsubsidized loans are not subsidized by the federal government. The student is responsible for paying the interest on the loan while in school, and the student must repay the loan after graduation.

Both loan types have an interest rate that is fixed for the lifetime of the loan. The interest rate for Subsidized loans is typically lower than the interest rate for Unsubsidized loans.

It is important to consider the importance of limiting what they borrow. Most students only need to take out one type of loan, either Subsidized or Unsubsidized. If a student does not need all of the loans offered to them, the Subsidized loan would be the type of loan they should accept first.

Unsubsidized loans are available to all students, regardless of need. These loans do not have to be repaid until after graduation, which can be helpful for students who need to finance their education.

To apply for all UWL Foundation scholarships, visit the scholarship resource center. Be sure to apply for scholarships! Utilizing the UWL Scholarship Resource Center can help you to receive free money to help pay your university bill.

How To Limit What You Borrow

If you know you will not need the loans offered to you as part of your financial aid award, we encourage you to decline those loans. This will limit the amount you will have to repay in the future.

You can also consider saving as much of your earnings from your summer job to help pay your college bill. This will help you to limit the amount you will have to borrow.

If you are still considering borrowing, consider borrowing only what you absolutely need. This will limit the amount you will have to repay in the future.

Students have the option to pay interest as they go, by making payments through their loan servicer. This can help to keep the amount you will have to repay as low as possible.

The Unsubsidized loan will begin to accrue interest immediately once the loan is disbursed. It is important to make payments on your loan as soon as possible to avoid paying interest on the loan.

Students who are eligible for a Federal Direct Loan will have an option to opt out of the loan servicer process. This will allow you to manage your loan on your own terms.

If you are enrolled in a Federal Direct Loan, you will be assigned a loan servicer when you first begin to repay your loan. This servicer will assist you with managing your loan and providing you with information about your loan.

It is important to stay in touch with your loan servicer and to make payments on your loan as soon as possible. This will help to keep the amount you will have to repay as low as possible.
