MASON SCIENCE COMMUNITY

Mason graduate helps launch new degree for women in STEM

Sarah Ward, a Mason graduate who earned her PhD in chemistry, has helped launch a new degree: a minor in science for women.

Mason researcher uses scent for COVID diagnostics

George Mason University researchers use scent to create a more aware, inclusive, and thriving science and research community.

IN THE NEWS

Biohealth Innovation are working to answer that call

Biohealth Innovation, are working to answer that call by creating a new degree for women in STEM at George Mason University.

RESEARCH & DISCOVERY

Mason scientists use scent for COVID diagnostics

Mason researchers use scent to create a more aware, inclusive, and thriving science and research community.

Events