Dear LSU Families,

As we look ahead to the remainder of the academic year, we are reminded that your children are the future of LSU and of our nation. LSU is dedicated to being a leader in education and research, and we are committed to providing our students with the best possible educational experience.

We are proud of the progress made during the fall semester, including the successful implementation of our Diversity & Inclusion Roadmap. However, there is still much work to be done. We are focused on remaining on action, for what we do will always matter more than what we say.

I am proud of the actions that we have taken as a university and as a community. We have implemented new initiatives to promote equity and inclusion, and we are working to create additional opportunities for students to succeed. We are also working to increase diversity and inclusion across the university, and we are committed to creating a welcoming and inclusive environment for all.

Student Success, along with current students and families who have benefitted from those resources.

Join us for our Tiger Family Talks webinar series on Tuesdays throughout the spring! Our next session will be on February 9, and it will feature speakers from the Center for Academic Success, along with current students and families who have benefitted from those resources.

You can also visit the Student Activities Board in this informative and interactive session to learn why self-care is important, and how you can take care of yourself.

We are also encouraging faculty to hold virtual service breaks to help students with their college plans and better communicate information moving forward.

We are also offering a variety of other resources to help students succeed, including Shell Study Groups, which can help with effective study strategies.
