In this Issue

honey produced by bees after feeding on flowers can help them better locate missing links to access them.

Mason teams from a number of different fields are working in unison at the Science Technology Campus in Manassas, Virginia, on an ambitious project to see if the new outdoor Forensic Science Research and Training Laboratory can help them.

Lovejoy was among the world’s foremost experts on biodiversity within the Amazon.

In the rainforest, her work focused on the importance of being able to identify the many different species of plants and animals that exist there.

The Mason Environmental Alumni Network is now active and open to any interested learners. If you are interested in joining, please fill out this information form. For more information, please contact Cosalum@mgmu.edu.

The Mason Science Mentorship Program is still being accepted! Priority submission has passed, but forms are still being accepted! If you are interested in joining, please fill out the form below, or contact our team at mconnole@gmu.edu with any questions.

Be Brave and Bold by registering for an array of both traditional and new events as we join us at Caboose Commons in an outdoor heated tent, to reunite with classmates, Mason graduates from the years 2012-2022, their friends, family, or significant others.

Questions? Email committee chair, Emma Gregory at mconnole@gmu.edu.

To stay up-to-date on our events, you can follow our calendar here.

We are proud to announce that the Support Science webpage is now live! Here you can find Opportunities for Impact, ongoing fundraising efforts at the College, Mason Science News & Events, ways to get involved, and more. You can visit the webpage here.

Support Science

Dear Alumni and Friends,

Thank you for your ongoing friendship with our College, and I hope 2022 is a year of joy and discovery for you all.

Sincerely,

George Mason University | College of Science | Exploratory Hall | 4400 University Drive, MS 5C3 |

If you have a question you’d like us to answer in a future newsletter, please write to us!