Dear Friends & Allies,

This is my final Worksafe newsletter message! As you read this, I am in the process of leaving my position at Worksafe. After more than five years working in various campaigns to address pollution and environmental injustice in Los Angeles' South Bay community of Wilmington, California — home to the Port of LA and a number of major oil refineries. Head to our website to learn more about Worksafe's history and the work we do.

I am deeply honored that our California Alliance for Secure Employment (CASE) has placed me with the Workers Resource Center (WWRC), in Ontario, CA. From there, Tim helped to build WWRC's capacity to support warehouse workers with legal issues related to health and safety. Adding to the recent changes at Worksafe, this month we said farewell to one of our most beloved staff attorneys, Tim Shadix, who will help keep the temporary worker project alive and well — keep an eye out for future updates on that.

Before joining Worksafe, Augustin has worked for the Port of LA and a number of major oil refineries, and has experience working with monolingual Spanish-speaking immigrants. He has a background as a community organizer, and spent more than five years working in various campaigns to address pollution and environmental injustice in Los Angeles' South Bay community of Wilmington, California. Augustin also has a background as a community organizer. He spent more than five years working in various campaigns to address pollution and environmental injustice in Los Angeles' South Bay community of Wilmington, California. Augustin also has a background as a community organizer. He spent more than five years working in various campaigns to address pollution and environmental injustice in Los Angeles' South Bay community of Wilmington, California.

SB 574 has passed the Senate and is heading into an Assembly floor vote in early September. If you agree that workers deserve to know about workplace hazards to which they are exposed, please contact your legislators! We’re talking cancer, breathing problems, skin disorders, and reproductive harm. What’s more, there are no federal laws requiring companies to disclose fragrance ingredients. We’re talking cancer, breathing problems, skin disorders, and reproductive harm. What’s more, there are no federal laws requiring companies to disclose fragrance ingredients.

Fragrance and flavoring ingredients in many cosmetic and personal care products are known to harm human health. For example, research has found that fragrance ingredients can cause asthma, allergies, and reproductive harm. We’re talking cancer, breathing problems, skin disorders, and reproductive harm. What’s more, there are no federal laws requiring companies to disclose fragrance ingredients.

About the women and men at Worksafe:

Meet Our New SoCal Attorney

We are thrilled to announce that Celine Smith, Esq., will be joining Worksafe's Southern California team as our new legal fellow. Celine has a background in environmental justice and economic security for low-wage workers, as well as experience in impact litigation and development of partnerships with community-based organizations. Celine's law degree is from the University of California, Los Angeles, and she has worked with workers for various organizations, including the Service Employees International Union and the Southern California Labor Federation.

Worksafe’s Tim Shadix Joins WWRC!

In his new position and through the California Alliance for Secure Employment (CASE), Tim will continue to build WWRC's capacity to support warehouse workers with legal issues related to health and safety. The good news? Tim isn’t going far — he is joining the WWRC team as Assistant Attorney General at the Workers Resource Center (WWRC). From there, Tim helped to build WWRC's capacity to support warehouse workers with legal issues related to health and safety. Adding to the recent changes at Worksafe, this month we said farewell to one of our most beloved staff attorneys, Tim Shadix, who will help keep the temporary worker project alive and well — keep an eye out for future updates on that.

Meet Our New SoCal Attorney

We are thrilled to announce that Celine Smith, Esq., will be joining Worksafe's Southern California team as our new legal fellow. Celine has a background in environmental justice and economic security for low-wage workers, as well as experience in impact litigation and development of partnerships with community-based organizations. Celine's law degree is from the University of California, Los Angeles, and she has worked with workers for various organizations, including the Service Employees International Union and the Southern California Labor Federation.

"And" We’re Seeking a New Legal Fellow!

We are excited to announce that Celine Smith, Esq., will be joining Worksafe's Southern California team as our new legal fellow. Celine has a background in environmental justice and economic security for low-wage workers, as well as experience in impact litigation and development of partnerships with community-based organizations. Celine's law degree is from the University of California, Los Angeles, and she has worked with workers for various organizations, including the Service Employees International Union and the Southern California Labor Federation. Join us in welcoming Celine to the Worksafe team and exploring the ways we can support workers in Southern California.

Onward,
Doug Parker
Executive Director

I am especially impressed and thankful for my colleagues at Worksafe. Those friends and supporters have become my friends and supporters, encouraging me to pursue this new role. I will work hard to live up to your expectations. I am deeply honored that Su have placed their confidence in me to lead Cal/OSHA. This new opportunity would not be possible but for the incredible welcome the community in the Bay Area and throughout California. From there, Tim helped to build WWRC's capacity to support warehouse workers with legal issues related to health and safety. Adding to the recent changes at Worksafe, this month we said farewell to one of our most beloved staff attorneys, Tim Shadix, who will help keep the temporary worker project alive and well — keep an eye out for future updates on that.

I am particularly inspired and thankful for my colleagues at Worksafe. Those friends and supporters have become my friends and supporters, encouraging me to pursue this new role. I will work hard to live up to your expectations. I am deeply honored that Su have placed their confidence in me to lead Cal/OSHA. This new opportunity would not be possible but for the incredible welcome the community in the Bay Area and throughout California.

The last few years have been a whirlwind — quitting my job and moving across the country for love, coming to Worksafe, getting married, having a baby, and welcoming our daughter into the world. Now, sooner than I expected, I am losing a parent, and facing the next milestone in the world. The last few years have been a whirlwind — quitting my job and moving across the country for love, coming to Worksafe, getting married, having a baby, and welcoming our daughter into the world. Now, sooner than I expected, I am losing a parent, and facing the next milestone in the world.

We will miss his thoughtful contributions, sharp legal mind, and thoroughly pleasant disposition. Fortunately, we found a great replacement for him in Augustin.

Thank You