A NOTE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Greetings.

Over the past month, I have been traveling across the state, meeting with students, faculty and staff at LSU campuses, as well as speaking with community leaders, from Shreveport and Alexandria to Baton Rouge and New Orleans. We have had a lot of visits from important people in our state, including the Governor and Lt. Governor, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of Labor.

In short, our flagship university is in a good place. The faculty and the student body has never been stronger than it is today. My two main areas of focus for LSU are stability and increased success. By working together to build upon the place we are right now, we will achieve both, and we will strengthen the University of the State.

We have been trending in the right direction, and stability has been more consistent over the past couple of years. The University has made a commitment to improving the life of our Tiger student, and we have been able to make a lot of progress in that regard.
