

Dear Colleague,

It's official! Spring has sprung. The snow on the Canadian Prairies has melted (or started to, at least) and the air is slowly turning warmer. The perfect time for revitalization and growth.

And with the world slowly opening back up, it's time to get caught up on those cherished moments with friends and family that we have all so greatly missed.

What's the perfect way to combine that with travel? Multigenerational journeys, of course. Please join Jessie, Ana and myself (Jenna) on May 4th as we host a webinar on "Multigenerational Trip Ideas from Emerging Destinations." Register here to join in the fun!

Lastly, Jessie moved to Dallas this month! If you're in the Dallas area (or know any travel peeps she should reach out to) please let me know and I'll pass that along to her. As always, we're happy to assist with anything you need! If you'd like to catch up, book a virtual appointment with me here.

Yours truly,

The Emerging Destinations team
Jenna, Jane, Jessie & Ana

- To combine a prominent Greek culture and a superior beach vacation you do not always need to go to the islands. You can enjoy the eternal city of Athens and then travel by land or air to a hidden gem of Peloponnese – Costa Navarino. Combine the best of two worlds: first, explore the vibrant city of Athens by staying at the elegant Athens Capital Hotel, then discover the local culture of Messenia along with a golden beach and turquoise waters of the Ionian Sea, and so much more at Costa Navarino resort. Check our suggested itinerary here.

- Meet with Pax More's Daria Polk to learn more about what we can do for you! Book your virtual appointment.

How to Talk Like an Icelander

Even the Emerging Destinations team has trouble pronouncing the names of the ports of call along Ocean Diamond and Seaventure routes in Iceland, and we thought you might, too. Click on the audio files below to see how locals pronounce place names like Seydisfjörður and Akureyri.
