On the Cover
Corn cob plant remains from Tehuacan Valley, Puebla, Mexico (c. 5000 BC to AD 1500.) Richard “Scotty” MacNeish’s sequence of five corn cobs demonstrates an increase in size over time due to selective breeding.

The Peabody is excited to welcome back artifacts – such as the Great Auk – which have been on loan to the Addison Gallery of American Art. Staff have begun to occasionally return to the building as well. Don’t forget to check out our YouTube page for videos from our Diggin’ In speaker series and other videos!
Henry Inman Portraits at the Peabody

Contributed by Ryan Wheeler

The Peabody collection includes three distinctive oil paintings attributed to the artist Henry Inman (1801-1846). The paintings are part of a larger collection created by Inman to produce the hand colored lithographs that appeared in the three volumes of The History of Indian Tribes of North America (1836-1844). Artifacts Return

Contributed by Marla Taylor

Despite both the Addison and Peabody closing to visitors due to Covid-19, their work behind-the-scenes has not stopped. After close to a year on loan to the Addison for their exhibition, A Wildness Distant from Ourselves: Art and Ecology in 19th Century America, ten objects are returned to the Peabody. Read on for more about this transport!
