A NOTE FROM JEREMIAH SHINN

Dear LSU families,

I hope you had a festive holiday season and were able to enjoy time with your student(s). We are thrilled to welcome them back to campus, and we look forward to an exciting and productive spring semester.

The beginning of a new year is a great time to reflect on where we've been and where we're going. I hope you will encourage your Tiger to think about what went well in the fall...and what they hope will go differently moving forward. Whether the fall semester went as they hoped or would like a do-over, now is a great moment to do more of what worked or change what didn't. Talk with them about what it means to achieve a solid finish to the academic year. Remind them of the world-class support resources we have for them at LSU and encourage them to make good use of them.

Some of the many resources you and your student should be aware of include: the Center for Academic Success, which offers students tools for time management, information on staying organized, tips on using a planner, study techniques, and tutoring; the Olinde Career Center, which can advise students on deciding on or changing their major, and help them begin to articulate what they know, what they're doing, and who they are into a powerful narrative for future employers or graduate schools; and Campus Life, which can help your student get involved, improve their leadership skills, and find student clubs or organizations that appeal to their interests.

We want your student to be successful. We also want them to be safe and healthy. Remember that as we come back to campus, masks are required indoors and within 50 feet of
