Welcome to our summer newsletter! Take a peak for unusual discoveries in the collection, future archaeologists, and updates on summer session’s Dig This! course. Also, season five of Diggin’ In has begun—make sure you sign up for our virtual series. There’s still more summer to come!

On the Cover
We had the pleasure of hosting the Dig This! class for the 2022 Andover Summer Session. Students learned more about archaeology and took part in their own archaeological excavations at the Mansion House site, located on the Phillips Academy Andover campus.
Archaeological (Career) Explorations
Contributed by Lindsay Randall

Peabody Curator of Education, Lindsay Randall, explores an archaeological excavation located on the property of the Jeremiah Lee Mansion, owned and operated by the Marblehead Museum. This site is the SECOND known, still standing, extant slave quarters in New England. Read on to learn more about this site!

Andover Summer Returns: Dig This! class at it again
Contributed by Emma Lavoie

The Peabody is keeping busy this summer with volunteers, interns, events and visits, researchers, and of course hosting the Andover Summer Session class, Dig This! Read on for more about this class and their exciting summer activities.

Cats and Bears
Contributed by John Bergman-McCool

Lately, the process of fully cataloging Adopt-A-Drawers has resulted in some interesting discoveries. The most recent of these comes from artifacts collected by Richard “Scotty” MacNeish in Tamaulipas, Mexico.
SEASON 5
