Still here and still doing it, indeed! This month’s newsletter is another reflection of the variety of conversations, learning, and fun that can be had at the Peabody Institute. The articles below explore the past from the present of the American Indian Movement and the takeover of Alcatraz Island in 1969 by Native activists. Read on to learn more!

Missing the Meaning - Understanding the Material Culture of Protest
Contributed by Lindsay Randall

Recently Peabody Curator of Education and Outreach, Lindsay Randall, collaborated with Dr. Miriam Villanueva of the Department of History and Social Science at Phillips Academy to create a new lesson that focused on both the American Indian Movement and the takeover of Alcatraz Island in 1969 by Native activists. Read on to learn more!

Cutshamache and Cochichawick
Contributed by Ryan Wheeler

What is now called Andover, North Andover, and parts of Lawrence, Massachusetts were once Cochichawick. Indigenous leader Cutshamache transferred the land to English colonists, not through a deed, but rather in an agreement. Read more about Cutshamache and the history of Cochichawick land.

Peabody Pets
Contributed by Emma Lavoie

Pets have always played an important part throughout history and there is regular evidence of this in the archaeological record. May 2021 marks National Pet month and what better way to celebrate than feature the furry friends of the Peabody’s staff! Meet our pets here!
