An Invitation to In Living Memory: A Concert of Stories and Songs

Dear Jumbos,

For a third year, the University Chaplaincy is collaborating with the Latinx Center and the SMFA for In Living Memory: A Concert of Stories and Songs to celebrate and highlight the religious and cultural traditions around this time of year, including Día de los Muertos, Samhain, All Souls Day, and All Saints Day. The ofrenda is already up in Goddard Chapel (pictured above), the papel picado are being strung up by students this week, and the order for pastries has been placed. All we need now is you finding your way here on Thursday night, to be near this happening.

Nearness is one of the uniting threads of the holidays and observances In Living Memory lifts up. Samhain, the holiday my Irish mother always made very special in our home, marks the time when the Celts believed that the spirit world is closer, a time when the normal barriers between the living and the passed are made porous and inviting. Today, Día de los Muertos, which the Latinx Center and Indigenous Center are also celebrating this week, is a blend of Mesoamerican ritual, Catholic religious tradition, and Spanish culture that takes many forms in many countries but centers on the sweet reunion of the dead with the living for a time. While never equivalent, the shared pulse of these holidays, to me, beats insistently to the question, "Will you choose nearness?"

Nearness to people, the living, the dead, this world, the solemn, grateful, joyful, heartbroken feelings of right now, that's how I hear the question. Nearness to the strength of communities who grieve and celebrate together, nearness to the fragility of what it means that each of us is a finite being in an infinite world. Nearness to the warmth that is always still possible whenever we choose colorful, connected, life.

It is an auspicious time to choose proximity to each other through music, candlelight, cocoa, poetry, and rich togetherness. We welcome you, first years to seniors, graduate student, alumni, staff, faculty, community member for this year's In Living Memory, and do hope you can be near.

Warmly,
Nora Bond
University Chaplaincy Program Manager

Hindu Chaplaincy and Hindu Students Association Diwali Puja

Friday, November 3, 5:00 p.m., Interfaith Center (58 Winthrop Street)

Diwali, or Deepawali, translates to row of lights and is commonly known as the Festival of Lights. The lunar calendar date for Diwali this year is Sunday Nov 12, 2023, but because it falls on the long weekend, Tufts is holding it a week earlier. On this day, the community will celebrate the return of Lord Ram, an avatar of Vishnu (1 of the three forces of creation, maintenance and destruction), to his home in Ayodhya after being exiled for 14 years. We will be giving our prayers to Ma Lakshmi, Goddess of Wealth, to bless us with prosperity, wealth, health and abundance, as is done in many households at this time. Join for a celebration this Sunday!

Stand by your God:

Paul of Tarsus on Fidelity

Jennifer Eyl, Associate Professor

Monday, November 6

12:00 - 1:15pm

CHAT Conference Room | Fung House, 48 Professors Row

Alongside the ever-expanding presence of Roman power, the first century CE saw a noteworthy increase in discourse about the virtue of fidelity (fides in Latin, pistis in Greek). Amid rising concerns over loyalty and trustworthiness that accompany empire, when the question of fidelity occupied the attention of the Julio-Claudian and Flavian administrations, how might we understand the apostle Paul's promotion of pistis as the quintessential virtue for his mission to attract and cultivate obedient Gentile followers? This talk explores the letters of Paul as illustrations of first century discourse advocating allegiant behavior.
