This October marks a milestone at the Peabody Institute—we have completed our inventory and reboxing project! But that is not all… the Peabody's creative education team is always refining established lesson units and we are always exploring institutional history. I love the story about Warren Moorehead's close call—just in time for Halloween!

Inventory Complete!
Contributed by Marla Taylor
After about four years of focused work, the Peabody Institute collections team has finally completed the inventory project! Read on to learn more about this project and the final days that lead to its completion.

REVOLTing Art: Understanding the Pueblo Revolt Through Modern Art
Contributed by Lindsay Randall
Peabody Curator of Education and Outreach, Lindsay Randall, creates a new lesson that changes how students interact with material about the Pueblo Revolt and gives more weight to the Pueblo experience, in their own words. Check it out here!

Buried Alive: A Grave Situation for W.K. Moorehead
Contributed by Emma Lavoie
This Halloween season calls for a spooky tale, shared by none other than W.K. Moorehead himself! Read on (if you dare!) to uncover this near-death experience through Moorehead's personal account.

On the Cover
Earlier this month, the Peabody staff and volunteers celebrated the Peabody's completion of the Inventory Project and said farewell to the Peabody's Inventory Specialist, Emily Hurley. We are so grateful to all the (past and present) Peabody staff, volunteers, PA work duty students, and financial supporters who've contributed to this project since its beginning in 2017.
