On the Cover

Earlier this month, the Peabody staff and volunteers celebrated the Peabody’s completion of its Inventory Project. It’s a major milestone for our collections and our community. We are grateful to the past, present, and future staff, volunteers, PA work duty students, and financial supporters who made this project possible. We are especially grateful to Emily Hurley, former inventory specialist, for her hard work and dedication.

Inventory Complete!

Since the start of the Inventory project in 2017, the Peabody Institute collections team has completed the inventory project. Here’s a look at the project and the team that made it happen.

REVOLTing Art: Understanding the Pueblo Revolt Through Modern Art

Contributed by Lindsay Randall

Peabody Curator of Education and Outreach, Lindsay Randall, creates a new lesson that changes how students interact with material about the Pueblo Revolt and gives more weight to the Pueblo experience, in their own words. Check it out here!

Buried Alive: A Grave Situation for W.K. Moorehead

Contributed by Emma Lavoie

This Halloween season calls for a spooky tale, shared by none other than W.K. Moorehead himself! Read on (if you dare!) to uncover this near-death experience through Moorehead’s personal account.
