Japanese Onomatopoeia Workshop with the Japan Society

Did you know Japanese has more onomatopoeia than almost any other language in the world, next only to Korean? Virtually everything you experience—sight, sound, smell, touch, and taste—can all be vividly expressed with onomatopoeia. In this workshop for adult learners (age 16 and above), students learn different groups of onomatopoeia such as giongo and gitaigo, covering many topics including animal sounds, weather, health, action, and of course, food! Students will act out a scene from manga, explore fun sound effects, and feel the power of descriptive writing using onomatopoeia.

Reduction 8 with Tsukasa Taiko

Reduction is a theatrical response that brings back the foundational aesthetics of Japanese music with a pared down concert of music and dance. It is a performative statement that articulates the stoicism of musical and theatrical elements that are lost in the non-traditional rhythmic and sonic embellishments that appear in mainstream renditions of Japanese drumming. Minimal arrangements of original compositions and improvisation merge contemporary and classical philosophies of a fluid and complex musicality.

THIS MONTH IN JAPAN

師走 shiwasu

師走 (Shiwasu). December. The origin of the name is still unknown. A popular theory is that it is named after Buddhist monks (師 means "teacher of people") who were busy moving from the East to the West during this month. “師走” literary means teachers running. Today in Japan, people may be busy running around to finish their job for Christmas and to welcome a happy New Year!

12月 juuni-gatsu
December

Shiwasu, the ancient name for December, means "teachers or priests rushing around". The name's origin is still unknown, but one theory is that it derives from teachers and priests who were busy moving from the East to the West during this month.
