Living in Historical Times

Many climate scientists believe the world is facing a new geological epoch that we are calling the Anthropocene. During the Anthropocene, no other species has had as much of an influence on the planet as humans. In this talk, we will look at the definition of the Anthropocene, its impacts, and its implications for the future.

August 6, 2021 | 10:30 a.m. to noon

Transfer Science Bridge 1 (virtual)

This 4-week bridge program is perfect for Transfer students to transition to Science at Mason. Bridge students are paired with faculty mentors and get access to academic support. For more information, contact chris.bradley@乔治城大学.edu

There's still time to get your free ticket for the 2021 STEMNoire research conference and holistic wellness week. The conference will take place from June 24, 2021 to June 26, 2021.

STEMNoire 2021

In the News

Mason contributes to discovery of rare animal properties in Texas' Badger Creek Valley. EID (Emerging Infectious Diseases) events to occur. EIDs are across the globe every day and creates opportunity for research. According to Alonso Aguirre, there is a need for a public health infrastructure to respond. EIDs are currently underserved. Through research, Mason contributes to finding cures.

Happening at Mason

What is in style and what isn't? The history of fashion. The fashion industry is ever-changing but there are always things that are in and trendy that everyone must have. In this talk, we will look at the history of fashion as well as what trends are in for the upcoming season.

Find your summer intern. The Career Development Center at George Mason University will hold a virtual event to help students find internships. Students will learn how to find summer internships and meet with employers.

Events

In this Issue

Facilitate a deeper understanding of mathematical concepts and prepare for future math courses with our free Math Boot Camps.

Before classes begin in August, the College will host in-person and hybrid STEM camps this July.

The STEM Boot Camps are designed for incoming students to gain a head start in their coursework.

In the News

Mason contributes to discovery of rare animal properties in Texas' Badger Creek Valley. EID (Emerging Infectious Diseases) events to occur. EIDs are across the globe every day and creates opportunity for research. According to Alonso Aguirre, there is a need for a public health infrastructure to respond. EIDs are currently underserved. Through research, Mason contributes to finding cures.