With the change of weather—from frosty winter cold to warm spring temperatures here in Massachusetts—I have developed a new connection with the peach tree in the backyard of my house. It has pinkish flowers with green sprouting leaves (a picture is included above). Standing like a canopy over the wooden bench, the tree is a resourceful presence for birds, squirrels, bees, and me. I spend time with the tree daily, looking at the blossoming flowers, sometimes taking photos and videos of the bees and birds around it, and always feeling joyful with the reflection of its gracefulness. The peach blossom tree has added serenity to my backyard.

Now, whenever I open the backdoor of my house to take a walk there, it is not simply for the purpose of getting sunshine, fresh air, or looking at the vast open sky. Now I do that with curiosity—how is the peach blossom tree doing? As I enter into the backyard, an image comes to my mind that echoes with the reality out there—the peach blossom with its flowers, offering shade to the wooden bench. At times, there are other creatures around. Rabbits, squirrels, bees, and other birds whose names I do not know, nibbling on the grass or looking for their next meals. Perhaps they are not even aware that their presence contributes to my wellbeing. Without any intention, just going about their business as usual, these little creatures are giving me company in this time of physical distancing, and enhancing my connection with the world around me. I am grateful to them.

I share this to remind you and myself that there is so much life around us. There are so many little parts of life existing in their own way, in their respective places, welcoming our participation in the world that they create. We may be physically distant from many people whom we want to spend time with, but where we are now has a world of its own. We can choose to find that world and benefit from its resources graciously.

We can allow ourselves to keep connecting with all the good that the Earth still continues to offer. Paying attention to the world around us can help us create a much needed connection—a connection that sustains joy, positivity, and gratitude. At least, I know that it is helping me. As Earth Day is today, I invite you to consider it as an opportunity to find and reconnect with parts of nature—plants, trees, flowers, birds, animals, etc.—as little details that fill up the space wherever you are.

In peace,
Ven. Priya Sraman
Buddhist Chaplain

Earth Day with the University Chaplaincy

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of Earth Day, the University Chaplaincy has created a series of practices and a collection of wise words from different traditions. These practices and quotes respond to our guiding question this year: What is your relationship to the Earth?

Follow our Instagram account here to see “3 simple practices for honoring your relationship with the Earth” today, tomorrow, and Friday this week.

We invite you to share your honoring practices this Earth Day by tagging us in your posts at @tufts_chaplaincy and using #TuftsEarthDay2020. Together, we can uplift the variety of ways our community is celebrating Earth Day this year.

Sustaining Practices with the University Chaplaincy

The University Chaplaincy team is offering short videos to the community, featuring a range of ideas for grounding and centering. These videos include practices and invitations to reflect, hosted by a chaplain or University Chaplaincy staff member. Our team hopes the videos will offer sustenance in this time, and speak to people from a range of religious and philosophical backgrounds. Each video will be posted to our Facebook page.

This week, Protestant Chaplain Dan Bell and Muslim Chaplain Abdul-Malik Merchant will offer reflections for Earth Day and the beginning of the holy month of Ramadan. To see more offerings as they are posted, follow the University Chaplaincy's Facebook page.

Protestant Evening Worship
Sundays, April 26 and May 3, 7:00 p.m. ET
Wherever you find yourself in mind, body, and spirit in these challenging times, there is always room for you in the PEW. Join the Protestant student community for worship through prayer, singing, preaching, and reflection over Zoom, led by Protestant Chaplain Dan Bell. While we cannot be together in person right now, Christ is still present among us and the Spirit draws us together to be God’s people in the world. After each service, everyone is welcome to stay and hang out.

On April 26, PEW welcomes the Reverend Wendy Miller Olapade as a guest preacher. Rev. Wendy is the Lead Pastor of Sanctuary United Church of Christ in Medford, Massachusetts. She will be reflecting on the story of the Road to Emmaus, when the risen Christ becomes known to the disciples in the breaking of the bread. Rev. Wendy will celebrate Holy Communion with us as well. If possible, please bring bread and wine or grape juice with you, or any food and drink you have.

Join the events via Zoom by clicking here.

Do you have an idea for how the University Chaplaincy can support you? Please contact the Program Manager, Nora Bond, at Nora.Bond@tufts.edu. We are working to be responsive to student needs in this time of a virtual chaplaincy, and welcome your insights, suggestions, and requests.

Please specify in your application materials your local time zone during the dates of the program.
COVID-19 Documentation Project

While health and safety is everyone’s first priority, the Tufts Digital Collections and Archives (DC&A) have been working to develop a community documentation project. Creating documentation of this historic moment not only provides firsthand accounts of life during a pandemic but can also serve as an emotional outlet for the people living through it. To that end, DC&A invites you to keep a journal or create other documentation of what is happening in your life now: at school, with your family and friends, in the news. We are especially interested in stories about the shift to remote learning, displacement from student housing, impact on student or off-campus jobs and other changes to your daily life.

If you’re interested in contributing to the Tufts COVID-19 Pandemic Collection at Digital Collections and Archives, please fill out this webform. Additional details and guidelines for submission are also available on the DC&A website. Any questions can be submitted to archives@tufts.edu.
