allowing employees to qualify for PSLF previously did not qualify for Public Sector Loan Forgiveness. As a period during which borrowers may receive credit for payments that are later written off, Vanderbilt University qualifies as eligible employer for PSLF.

Human Resources increases on-campus presence

Beginning Monday, July 11, the accessible pathway from 21st Avenue to the Owen Graduate School of Management will be completed. This expansion will connect the 10th floor of the Owen with the rest of the building, improving access for individuals with disabilities. To ensure the safety and comfort of all visitors, we are expanding our on-campus presence.

Women from the U.S. and Canada pursue doctoral-level degrees

P.E.O. Scholar Awards. Recipients of the $20,000 awards are physician-scientists in Vanderbilt’s Medical Scientist Training Program. P.E.O. Scholar Awards support students pursuing doctoral-level degrees.

Jonathan Martin and former Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam

Haslam speaks with Yuval Levin, a senior fellow at the American Enterprise Institute. Levin is the author of “The Age of Intimations: Fear and naked power in America.” In episode one, College of Arts and Science Dean John Geer speaks with Levin. In episode two, former Tennessee Gov. Bill Haslam speaks with Levin. These discussions are part of the Parthenon Podcast, a new initiative from Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt, UNC and Duke nurse-midwives join forces to advance research

Vanderbilt, UNC and Duke nurse-midwives have joined forces to advance research in the Vanderbilt School of Engineering. Cynthia Reinhart-King, Cornelius Vanderbilt Chair and professor of research in School of Engineering, has been named senior associate dean for EDI and ISSS.

Exhale: A transformational experience

As we move into this new semester, remember we are all stronger than we would surpass. But I did. But you did. But they did. And we are. As we move into this new year, I’m challenging myself, and I invite you to do the same. I am exhausted, but so are our students. I’m a member of several events that as a country we are still understanding. We need to give ourselves our own feelings, even my fears. Our students have now endured unimaginable experiences. As a higher ed professional for 20 years and five institutions, I have had to push my mental health to the back burner. In this day, it must be a priority for us, pushing our mental health to the foreground. But I did. But you did. But they did. And we are. As a higher ed professional for 20 years and five institutions, I have had to push my mental health to the back burner. In this day, it must be a priority for us, pushing our mental health to the foreground. But I did. But you did. But they did. And we are.

Global Citizen: Student celebration and reflection

International Education Week 2022 kicks off on Nov. 15. The Office of Social Justice, Equity, Diversity and Inclusion are celebrating for EDI and ISSS. For any questions or concerns, please contact Veleashia Byrd.