As the graduate student representative on the SOM DEI Council, she has initiative called, "First Gen Fridays" to spotlight first generation PA of color who take the time to understand their lifestyles and cultures. In a future article, Sahiba describes her experience being a minority woman in medicine. Her passion for DEI is evident. "We are in an environment made by the majority, to help the majority succeed and quite frankly to only treat the majority."

Her interest in medicine stems from her desire to become a healthcare professional that could serve others with her empathy and vulnerability. She states, "While on a service-learning trip to St. Louis I learned of the need for PA's to be part of the solution. As the graduate student representative on the SOM DEI Council, she has..."
