Sound Off: Stories from Veterans and Military Dependents at IVC

The Veterans Services Center officially unveiled the “Sound Off” comic book during the Veterans Day event on November 9. Sound Off is a photo-story blog and comic book of veteran and military-connected students sharing stories from their life experiences. Faculty Tutor Max Evans served as editor for the project, former IVC professor Nathan Cayanan created the comic book illustrations and served as artistic lead. Contributing artists were Cassandra Perez, Kelly Tieu, and IVC student Joyce Wen. Read More »

COLLEGE NEWS AND INFORMATION

IVC Honors Veterans at Annual Veterans Day Ceremony

On November 9, IVC's Veterans Day Commemoration featured the presentation of colors by the U.S. Army Southern California Recruiting Battalion, and an instrumental rendition of the national anthem by students Alex Lopez, Manny Sandoval, and Paul Vu. Following the unveiling of the Sound Off project, student Jorge Henriquez shared his story of enlisting in the Marine Corps and then transitioning to college at IVC. Student Isabella Cortes shared her story of being a dependent of a veteran and the challenges she faced along the way. The event included a resource fair and a luncheon provided by Cox Cable Company and the IVC Foundation. See Photos »

Second Annual IVC/Saddleback Student Research Symposium

The IVC and Saddleback Honors Programs held their 12th Annual IVC/Saddleback Student Research Symposium on November 3. Students from both colleges convened at IVC to share 59 oral and poster presentations of their research on topics including inequitable access to public transportation among community college students, AI-driven prediction for early detection of diabetes, and college students' use of disposable vapes.
