A NOTE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear LSU Families,

As we celebrate the successful conclusion of an academic year that has been unlike any other in our history, I am immensely proud of everyone in our

LSU community, and especially our outstanding students, who have persisted through the pandemic with exceptional resolve and dedication to their academic goals.

I am also extremely encouraged by the great progress we are making to get as many students, faculty, and staff vaccinated as possible, which is allowing us to begin safely resuming more of the in-person events and activities that we have waited so long to enjoy together. With each passing day, our campus atmosphere is beginning to feel more and more like the one we love and cherish.

We are all looking forward to celebrating the great achievement of our 2021 and 2020 graduates with commencement ceremonies for every college on campus over the next two weekends, and I want to give special thanks and congratulations to the families of our graduates. Your support and encouragement have been invaluable to your loved ones who are celebrating this wonderful milestone in their lives, and I share in the pride you are feeling at this most special moment.

With great excitement, we are also busily preparing to return to holding the same level of face-to-face classes in the fall semester as we did prior to the pandemic. Our faculty and staff members have greatly missed seeing students fill our classrooms and campus buildings, and we are all anxious to see them return. To ensure our fall semester is as successful as possible, we expect to continue relying on many of the established safety and wellness measures we have taken this year.

This past year has tested everyone in our LSU community. Along with the pandemic, we were impacted by hurricanes, severe winter weather, a challenging economy, and more. Through it all, we have shown what we are made of, and why we have always overcome arduous periods in the past and emerged stronger from the experience.

While we will certainly face more challenges in the future, I am confident that everything we have encountered and overcome together over the past year has placed us firmly on the path to an even brighter future at LSU.

As always, thank you for your continued support of our university and your fellow Tigers.

Sincerely,

Thomas C. Galligan, Jr.
LSU Interim President and Professor of Law
