The start of fall can be a time of excitement as the leaves begin to change in color, but also a time to reflect on the past. This month's newsletter looks at three examples of the impact we can make over time—sharing the remnants of a shipwreck from over 100 years ago with Andover students, childhood graffiti from the Peabody's early days, and our most recent Annual Report.

What's on the Window?

On the Cover
Student work emerges after firing - Last fall the Peabody had the pleasure to host artists and educators - Dominique, Maxine, and Mia - from the Pueblo of Jemez. This was the fifth year that the Toyas had visited PA. Each visit brings lots of excitement to Thayer Zaeder’s ceramic classes, as well as raw materials from New Mexico, including hand-dug clay, polishing stones, micaceous slip, and fuel for the open air firing. Many of these student pieces incorporate techniques like fine line painting, polishing, or use of traditional ceramic forms.
