THOUGHTS FROM THE DIRECTOR
Joe Jams

On August 12, 2020, a CINA Summer Research Team presented their final findings related to the "What's Next" topic of their study. This year, four teams conducted comprehensive research projects with a focus on criminal investigations and network analysis (CINA). The teams were introduced to this topic through virtual summer research teams, which provided an opportunity to collectively analyze and develop emerging threats and trends in the national security arena.

CINA Summer Research Team

Meet the CINA Summer Research Team

On August 4, 2020, we held our CINA Annual Meeting under these "new normal" change, and (2) a good organization and team sees the opportunities in such a dynamic environment.

My two big takeaways from this last year are (1) the only constant in life is (unexpected) change, and (2) a good organization and team sees the opportunities in such a dynamic environment.

My two big takeaways from this last year are (1) the only constant in life is (unexpected) change, and (2) a good organization and team sees the opportunities in such a dynamic environment.

Overall, we have demonstrated that virtual events can provide an efficient, state-of-the-art environment for connecting with experts and leading organizations to conduct research and to share findings that will contribute to our understanding of the changing landscape and emerging threats.
